Constitutional Analysis Tool - a practical application designed to help you analyze large documents that include constitutions. The program can be accessed in the interface of your Internet browser and allows you to save the analysis parameters as templates that can be used with other documents. The program consists of two main views: on the left is a document tree that displays the structure of the text; on the right is a grid that displays the content. By means of the navigation bar at the top of the program window, you can zoom in and out, navigate the text, select the part of the text you want to see, and so on. You can open the text you want to study in any file browser, import a pre-loaded analysis template, or enter the text in any other way. Once the analysis of your document is complete, the program allows you to save it as a template that can be used to quickly analyze similar documents in the future. In addition, the program displays several detailed analytical tools that can be used to study the content of the text: history of the text, parts analysis, subparts analysis, branches analysis, topology analysis, word analysis, numeric values analysis, tables analysis, statistics analysis, grammar analysis, search index, and so on. The program also allows you to organize and display the data you obtain using the Tree Grid view. In this mode, you can display any level of the text in a tree grid that can be expanded and collapsed to choose only the part of the text you want to see. Once you decide which parts of the text you want to study in detail, you can select them using the Tree Grid view, then select the Format tool from the Tools menu, and choose the section you want to display. The program has several other features that allow you to study the text more deeply. For example, you can print the text you want to study and analyze, and you can draw graphics that describe the history of the text. The program includes a sample file that you can use to study the evolution of the text over time. The program can be accessed in the interface of your Internet browser and allows you to save the analysis parameters as templates that can be used with other documents. The program runs on any browser that supports HTML, JavaScript, and Adobe Flash. Multi Browser History: The multi browser feature can be used to analyze the text of several documents, with the advantage that the analysis process is considerably speedier than with the normal mode. For this to be useful, you must have several browsers and open the programs you want to analyze in them simultaneously. For example, when you open the program in Internet Explorer, the default browser, open a second instance of the browser in which you want to analyze a different document (that is, another document in Internet Explorer). This will save you time
