But that simplicity hides a wealth of features. When you first open the app, you'll find that your choices have been limited to presets (and some tools around the edges). Once you adjust your settings manually, the app creates or updates presets for you, so you don't have to keep repeating those adjustments. The forthcoming Photoshop Lightroom let's you create GPS-specific geotags from your photos instead of downloading geotags from websites like Google Maps. You can then upload your geotagged photos to an online service like Flickr and share them on a map.
