Steering the flow: training, facilitation, and implementation of a peer observation curriculum in pre-clinical undergraduate medical education. In pre-clinical undergraduate medical education, over time, peer observation practices emerge at varying levels of quality. This study sought to train learners to facilitate peer observation through a peer observation curriculum, and assess the ability of students to implement peer observation practices. The curriculum targeted third year students. The three-phase curriculum was comprised of: (1) development and implementation of the curriculum; (2) implementation of the curriculum; and (3) a post-curriculum assessment. The development and implementation of the curriculum spanned 3 years, from 2006 to 2008. After completion of the curriculum, peer observation tasks were introduced, learner attitudes and peer observation skills assessed, and two post-curriculum assessments designed. Skills and attitudes improved after curriculum implementation. Two post-curriculum assessments revealed improvements in peer observation skills and peer observation implementation ($p=0.03$) and that over time, the proportion of students trained to mentor peers increased from 32% in 2006 to 55% in 2007 and to 66% in 2008. Peer observation can be successfully implemented in clinical undergraduate medical education. Through the development and implementation of the peer observation curriculum, this program improved students' attitudes and peer observation skills. Similar to other medical education programs, the peer observation curriculum has the capacity to improve attitudes and skills of students. Through this curriculum, peer observation practices have the potential to become core competencies of the medical profession. Mount Ijemba Mount Ijemba is a high point and the second tallest mountain in the Eastern Province of Cameroon. It is located in the Foumban Forest Reserve, in the extreme southeast corner of the province. It is part of the Oku Volcanic Arc, a monogenetic volcanic complex, which includes the Kousséri, Ténéré and Kokoroko mountains. The volcano has erupted at least 24 times, the last being in May 2012. After an eruption in November 2011, the Cameroon government placed the mountain on a list of potential evacuation zones in preparation for future eruptions.
